

ABSTRACT

A writing implement that includes a body having an opening through which a writing tip passes along a longitudinal direction, and a slot extending approximately along the longitudinal direction; a support on which the writing tip is mounted, the support being placed inside the body; a strip that includes a first portion fixed to the support, a central portion and an end portion guided along a curved path, the strip being flexible and capable of being moved between two positions, namely a writing position in which said strip gives access to the opening and a stowing position in which the strip closes off the opening; and a button connected to the support, the button being capable of being moved along the slot between a distal position relative to the opening, for which the support and the strip are in the stowing position, and a proximal position relative to the opening, for which the support and the strip are in the writing position.